VICTORIA POLICE

About this book

Victoria Police wrote this book.

This book tells you what happens when you report a sexual offence to the police.

Report means to tell someone that something has happened.

A sexual offence is when someone

- does sexual things to you that you do not want

or

- tries to do sexual things to you that you do not want.

About sexual offences

It can be hard to know if someone has done a sexual offence. It is okay if you do not know.

Detectives work out if someone has done a sexual offence. That is their job.

Detectives are special police who wear suits.

The police you talk to first might wear a uniform.

The person who did the sexual offence might be someone you know and trust.

Sexual offences can be more than 1 thing.

A sexual offence can be when someone

- tries to put something in your private parts

or

- shows you pictures of private parts that make you feel bad.

Private parts are your

- bottom

- vagina

- penis

- breasts.

You might use other words for your private parts. That is okay.

A sexual offence can also be when someone

- touches your private parts when you do not want them to

- asks you to touch their private parts when you do not want to

- in your family has sex with you

- posts photos of your private parts online when you do not want them to.

Sexual offences can happen anywhere.

They can happen

- at home

- at school

- at church

- at aged care services or nursing homes

- at disability services

- online.

You can tell police what happened

Often the person who did the sexual offence tells you not to tell anyone what they did.

Do not listen to them. You can tell someone.

You can tell police what happened.

When you tell the police they can

- help you

- make sure you are safe

- tell you who you can talk to for support.

How you might feel when you report a sexual offence

When you report a sexual offence you might

- feel embarrassed
- be scared
- think that you did something wrong
- think that nobody will believe you.

If you do not want to tell police there are support agencies and other people that can help you.

If you are not ready to talk to the police you can contact the Centre Against Sexual Assault.

Call 1800 806 292

How you can report to the police

You can call your local Sexual Offence and Child Abuse Investigation Team or SOCIT.

SOCITs are detectives that have special training so they can investigate sexual offences.

Investigate means the police work out what happened.

You can find the phone number for your local SOCIT later in this book.

You can talk to someone at your local police station.

You can call 000 in an emergency.

What happens when you report a sexual offence

We will treat you with respect.

The police want you to know that they will

- listen to you
- take you seriously
- help you.

You will talk to a detective about the sexual offence.

The police will make sure

- you are safe

- a doctor or nurse helps you if you are hurt

- you can find emergency housing

- you get support when you go to court

- your friends and family can get help

- you can see a counsellor.

A counsellor is someone you can talk to about how you feel.

You can have a support person with you.

A support person can be a friend, family member or counsellor who can be with you when you talk to police.

It is okay to tell the police if the sexual offence happened a long time ago.

It is never too late to tell the police.

The investigation

You will talk to a detective about the sexual offence.

After you tell the police about the sexual offence they will start an investigation.

They will give you information about what they will do.

In the police investigation the detective can record your statement.

A statement is when you tell the police about what happened to you.

The detective can also keep and look at the evidence.

Evidence is something that helps the police find out what happened.

For example, photos or fingerprints.

If you want to stop the investigation

You can ask the police to stop the investigation at any time.

The police will keep the evidence they found.

You can ask the police to start the investigation again at any time.

Why the police might not stop the investigation

The police will not stop the investigation if a suspect

- is a dangerous person
- might have hurt other people before
- might hurt someone else.

A suspect is the person who you say did the sexual offence.

The police will let you know if they do not stop the investigation.

When you make your statement

You can have a support person with you when you talk to the police.

The police will ask you to make a statement.

A statement is when you tell the police about what happened to you.

The police

- write down the statement with you

- might video the statement.

We know it can be hard to tell us what happened to you.

It is important to tell the police as much as possible.

When you make a statement the police will let you

- use your communication aids
- have a support person

- use an interpreter
- have time to take a break

- have an Independent Third Person.

An Independent Third Person is someone who is trained and used in interviews with police.

They will help you understand what is going on.

You might need time to think of everything that happened.

It might be hard to remember things that happened a long time ago.

You do not need to rush.

Evidence

The police must get evidence.

To get evidence the police will talk to

- you

- a witness.

A witness is a person who saw or knows what happened.

A medical exam

Sexual offences do not always leave marks on your body.

Police might ask you to have a medical exam.

A medical exam is a special health check. It is sometimes called a forensic exam.

A medical exam might help the police get more evidence.

You can say no to a medical exam.

Evidence can be lost if a lot of time goes by.

A doctor or nurse does the medical exam.

They might take photos of where you are hurt.

The doctor or nurse tells the police what they find.

A support person can be with you when you have the medical exam.

For example

- a counsellor

- a family member

- a friend.

A support person can not be a witness.

The police talk to the suspect

If the police find the suspect they might interview them.

Interview means the police talk to them and ask questions.

The police might interview the suspect more than once.

There might be more than 1 suspect.

You might already know the suspect.

The police will tell you when they talk to a suspect.

The police will make sure you are safe.

The investigation can take time

The investigation can take a long time.

The police should tell you

- new information
- what they will do next.

You can ask the police questions about the investigation.

The police might talk to you more than once.

It might upset you to talk about the sexual offence more than once.

You can ask for help from police or support services.

If you do not want the police to talk to you about the sexual offence we can talk to your support person instead.

Remember that the police are there to

- help you

- make sure you are safe.

What happens at the end of the investigation?

The police might

- have a lot of good evidence

and

- think the suspect might be dangerous to you or other people.

Then the police might put the suspect in jail.

The suspect will stay in jail until they have to go to court.

Sometimes there is not enough evidence to prove what happened.

The police might

- not keep the investigation going

and

- let the suspect go.

This does not mean the police do not believe you.

If the police have any evidence they will keep the evidence in a safe place.

Later the police

- might find more evidence

- can use the evidence to prove in court what happened.

Going to court

If the police charge the suspect you might need to go to court.

Charge means the police say the suspect has done a crime.

You can have a support person with you in court.

At court

- you might have to talk about what happened

- the suspect might talk about what happened.

You do not have to see the suspect in court.

You can talk about what happened in another room.

People in court will see you on a screen.

Support when you go to court

You can get special help in court for

- you
- your family.

This help is called witness support.
